More Footprints

I had a dream of a marvelous place,
where I walked with the Master pace for pace.
And as we had that marvelous walk,
we also had a marvelous talk.

“Show me Master, the footprints of my life.
Show me the good times and show me the strife.”
For much of the way the Master’s prints,
that I'm trying to follow print for print,

Run for a long way, this happens, then gradually,
I seem to veer off to that hill or valley,
off of the Master’s straight and even pace,
my prints seem to wander all over the place.

Then my prints come more in line with His.
and then are actually paralleling His,
but then an interesting thing happens,
as I viewed our prints as through a lens,

My prints converged with His over the miles,
Then I notice another change that brings smiles, my prints are growing to be as big as His,
and soon they are the same size as His.

Then it looks like there is only one set.
This continues for a while, then they get all jumbled again, just gashes and mounds.
The Master's steady prints are not to be found.

I turned and said “Master I get the first prints,
where I am wild taking off on tangents.
That’s when I was a new Christian, just learning, but Your pace was always steady leading.”

“Then the time came when my smaller prints grew,
to be inside yours, I learned to walk with you.
I think I understand everything so far,
When mine became the same size as yours
are,

“I was becoming like You in every way,
but what I don't see, is why they didn't stay.
Why did they get all jumbled up like before?
Did I regress, did I stumble, why, what for?”

The Master just smiled then He outright laughs.

“You don't remember what happened?” He asks.
“When all those prints looked jumbled at a glance,
you did not stumble, that's when we danced!”

Stories With Morals

Two Neighbors

A wise and successful man bought a beautiful house with a huge orchard. But, not all were happy for him. An envious man lived in an old house next to him. He constantly tried to make his fellow neighbor's stay in the beautiful house as miserable as possible. He threw garbage under his gate and made other nasty things.

One fine day the wise man woke up in a good mood and went into the porch to notice buckets of garbage thrown there. The man took a bucket, cleaned his porch. He carried a bucket and went to knock on his envious neighbor's door.

The envious neighbor heard a knock at his door and gleefully thought, "I finally got him!". He answered his door ready to quarrel with his successful neighbor. However the wise man gave him a bucket of freshly picked apples saying,

"The one who is rich in something, shares it with others."

"I'm enrolling in seminary college so I can learn about miracles, like how to pay off my student loans."

Children's Sabbath

On January 28, we had a Children's Sabbath where the kids led out in the praise music singing their hearts out. In addition to a great children's story by Gil, we had special music by Ashley and her daughter Macey and a sermon from Brian Toppel.
